Exclusive Interview With

LINDSAY ADLER

Her fashion images became iconic. Her style is unique. She has a special "bond" with the light so that's why each and every picture that was taken looks polished to the absolute perfection. And she was handling the cameras for more than half of her life.

If what was written above didn't "ring a bell" I will give you a clue: Lindsay Adler.

Lindsay can be defined as a fashion photographer, entrepreneur, author, and educator.

She has already published five books, she set up many tutorials so to give "a helping hand" to the upcoming generations of photographers and she published thousands of images in various highly rated magazines. Her career in this "image taking" art started at a very fresh age, when other girls were still dressing and undressing their dolls.

Now Lindsay Adler is famous and she has her own studio in Chelsea, New York City.

Her ascension in photography was a succession of trials and errors, even though seeing her published images is difficult to imagine that!

But despite of her fame and her widely recognized success, she doesn't call herself "a photographer";

Lindsay prefers to define herself and to be seen by the others an image creator.
